Salmon Dying; Eggs Not Laid

By DOUG MacRAE

Fungus-covered salmon, swollen with eggs, were dying in the shallow mouth of Goldstream today while the battle continued to rage over how best to get the fish upstream to spawn.

Fisheries experts said today less than two weeks remain in which to get frustrated fish up the creek. Meanwhile, federal and provincial fisheries officials have scheduled a meeting with Greater Victoria Water Board Wednesday to debate the problem.

The dam itself could be build of sandbags, again by volunteers, at negligible cost in one day, he said. The amount of water needed for the salmon run without a dam would be no more than one-third of the total daily water consumption in southern Vancouver Island. Ald. William Noel told Saanich council Monday night that average consumption is 14 million gallons a day in Greater Victoria.

Noel also criticized fisheries officials for making "no effort" to relieve the situation by dredging or building small

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Water Board Commissioner Ron Upward had come in for "pretty stiff criticism" for delaying supply of the needed five million gallons of water. "He (Upward) has done a lot over the last two or three weeks, and nobedy has bothered to say that," Curtis

Upward has installed a pump to put one million gallons a day into Goldstream, but conservationists said the amount is inadequate.

Esquim alt-Saanich MP David Anderson had joined the conservationists, saying the water board should not hesitate to provide the needed five million gallons a day.

"They're out of their minds not to do it," Anderson said in a telephone interview from a telepi Ottawa.

"It's morally indefensible that you damage a living resource such as salmon just for the sake of a clean car or a green lawn.'

SAVE RUN

Greater Victoria water commissioner Ron Upward has said that diverting five million gallons of water a day — the amount necessary to save the salmon run - would mean rationing next summer and lost revenue unless rains make up the difference.

Anderson said the economic argument for not putting water into Goldstream is "utter hogwash, balderdash, anything bad you can say

"It's the same type of gument that says you should put green cement on the lawns of the Empress because it costs less to keep." He said he is convinced Victorians would be willing to conserve water if they are "bluntly" told that it is necessary to save the salmon.

he said, it should also com-pare the revenues the city gets as a result of its tourist

Anderson said he has re-ceived letters from his constituents asking him to speak-out to help save the salmon. He said he is convinced the problem is serious because he has "absolute confidence" in the word of B.C. Wildlife Smith, who, with naturalist Freeman King, has led the drive to save the fish.

VANCOUVER - Unemployment will be at its highest in 10 years this winter, Canadian Labor Council president Donald MacDonald said Monday.

MacDonald, who was interviewed at the B.C. Federa-tion of Labor Convention, said unemployment could go as high as nine per cent na-tionally, and will exceed ten per cent in Quebec and the Maritimes.

He said the current unemployment was "deliberately induced" by the federal government's anti-inflation policies.

Proposed Emergency Powers-The Full Text

OTTAWA (CP) - Following is the text of legislation presented in the Commons Monday by Justice Minister John Turner "to provide temporary emergency powers for the preservation of public order in

An act to provide temporary emergency powers for the preservation of public order in Canada.

Canada continues to affirm that men and institutions re-main free only when freedom is founded upon respect for moral and spiritual values and the rule of law;

And whereas the public order in Canada continues to be endangered by elements of the group of persons or asso-ciation known as Le Front de Liberation du Quebec who advocate the use of force or the commission of crime as a means of or as an aid in ac complishing governmental change within Canada with respect to the Province of Quebec or its relationship to Canada, and who have re-sorted to murder, threat of murder and kidnapping as well as the commission of other acts involving actual or threatened coercion, intimida-

And whereas the Parlia-ment of Canada, following ap-proval by the House of Commons of Canada of the mea-sures taken by His Excellency the Governor General in Council pursuant to the War Measures Act to deal with the state of apprehended insurrec-tion in the Province of Quebec the clear understanding that the authority for such measures should remain in force for a temporary period only, desires to ensure that lawful and effective measures can and will continue to be taken against those who thus seek to destroy our democratic governmental system, and agrees that all such measures as are hereafter deterto be necessary by reason of the present emergency be taken under the authority of and in accordance with the provisions of a law of Canada expressly enacted for that purpose, the terms of which provide for its continuation in orce for a temporary period-

Emergency Use Only

THERE ARE THREE GOOD will obviate the present War Measures Act regulations; it will exercise much less scope than those termination date. For the rest, although its need in a time of extreme emergency is largely conceded, it is a type of law which has always been foreign to the Canadian way of life; it is a legislative garment which does not fit comfortably on our body politic.

Granted the validity-still to be clarified for many Canadians-of the national emergency which resulted in invocation of regulations under the War Measures Act, the latest measure appears as an effort to meet the unusual conditions which have been precipitated by the FLQ. It is directed specifically against the FLQ or any organization arising from it, and it calls for search and arrest without warrant, for limited detention without bail, and for imprisonment - usually with a five-year maximum - for persons found guilty of advocating, promoting, harboring or aiding the FLQ. Membership in the FLQ is pronounced a crime. A person may be arrested merely on suspicion of being a member of the FLQ, or of being "about to commit an act," although in these cases he must be charged or released within three days unless an order has been formally issued to detain him for seven days - the usual term of the

The new legislation is thus less points in regard to the bill to far-reaching than the WMA proprovide temporary emergency - visions, which, for instance, perpowers now before Parliament: it mitted 21 days detention. It is restricted to use against the FLQ and it is not intended to be used by the attorneys general of provinces regulations; and it has a definite other than Quebec. It permits access to legal advice, it denies bail only where "just cause" is asserted; and although the Bill of Rights is not permitted to hamper application of the law, "arbitrary detention or imprisonment" is not accepted as legal. Termination date of the measure is automatically next April 30, unless Parliament votes an

> But an ominous note is struck in Justice Minister Turner's remarkthat a bill to make the temporary powers permanent should come before the Commons justice committee before any firm parliamentary action. That should alert the public to the great danger of this type of legislation: that having been accepted in one form it may later be extended in content or time without much public opposition. Familiarity breeds consent where legislation is concerned.

This sort of abrogation of normal peacetime liberties should be viewed as an extreme measure to meet an extreme situation, to be chopped off at the earliest possible moment. Canada is not to be thought of as living in perpetual deadly crisis, nor is a permanent suspension of even part of the Bill of Rights to be considered acceptable to this nation.

In other words, before any individual or group sets out to exploit natural riches, he or it should be required first to contribute to a study of the effects its activities will have.

Canadian industrial history and that of British Columbia is no exception - has many examples of projects which have been undertaken for profit under conditions which appear to be thoroughly legitimate but have, in the process, created hazards to health and loss So, also, are such operations as equally valid.

> The time is long past when a money-making project in any natural resource can be developed without consideration for its effects on the environment. It can be argued that such strictures on development will hamper economic growth, discourage initiative in certain areas and block works that provide payrolls. So they may. At the same time they could overcome conditions which could make life intolerable for those in the regions where development takes place and inflict a higher price on society than the profits to be extracted from the utilization of the resource.

The Pentagon Starts Its Power Drive

By FRANK MANKIEWICZ and TOM BRADEN from Washington

WITH the election out of the way, the battle for real power in Washington will begin. It has, in fact, already begun, with Pentagon "sources" explaining to newsmen that by 1974 the United States will be reduced to the status of a second-class power. The argument is also being put forward by the militaryindustrial public relations front called the America Security Council, with full-page newspaper advertisements.

Since the National Strategy Committee of the council consists largely of retired generals and admirals, the point of view is predictable, but the White House has been circulating the advertisement as though it were an official

It is, in fact, not only unofficial, but totally erroneous. The United States is not falling behind Russia in the arms race, but is far ahead, so much so that if it stopped building missiles immediately it would still be ahead several years from numbers. As of now, the United States has 1,710 long-range missiles as compared with a Soviet force of 1,518. In addition, the country is now installing (mutiple independently target able re-entry vehicles) on many of its

United States Edge

When the job is completed by the mid-71s, it will give the United States more 7,000 warheads without any new missiles. Russia has not begun to deploy MIRV and, so far as U.S. intelligence knows, has not yet perfected it, if indeed it intends to do so.

But the argument of organization, even one with White House support, is not nearly so important as fact that Pentagon and White House strategists, while admitting that the public relations front is exaggerating, are making much the same case, if in a more sophisticated way.

Their argument is based upon what they call "a scenario," and it runs about they call "a scenario," and it runs about as follows: One day, they imagine Henry

- The President, they say, will then have to make a dreadful decision. Confronted with a certainty of millions of American casualties, he will have to decide whether or not to fire back at Russian cities, in the certain knowledge that if he does the Russians will retaliate with a second strike against our cities. To avoid having to make this dreadful decision, so the argument goes, it is essential not only to build more ABM's, but also to have an even larger super-possibility, but only if one considers that anything is possible, To imagine that the Soviet Union would take the chance of having all its cities destroyed is to imagine that Russia will have leaders who have gone mad.

Meantime, no one denies that the two major nuclear powers have now assembled enough weaponry to kill each other many times over. It is, in fact, just this balance of power which the more-weapons advocates fear.

An acknowledgment at the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) that there is a power balance and that there is no point in continuing to pile up a more massive power balance would bring about a major decrease in Pentagon spending and Pentagon power. That is why the present campaign was timed to coincide with the reconvening of SALT and the new Pentagon budget hearings.

White House assistance for that campaign bodes ill for the former and well for the latter. It is a fair guess that elected congressmen will disinclined to argue with generals retired or active — who tell them that their vote may make the difference between independence and surrender. But unless they do, we appear to be headed for another round in the arms race, a higher defence budget and less money for the things which matter.

Police Questioning

I was appalled at the statements regarding police questioning made by the Rev. Mr. Morriss of the First United Church, mentioned in the Times of October 19. He said the police had no right to question his long-haired son on a public beach, as it was an attack on civil liberties. With all the "pot" being passed around among the youth I believe the police are justified in questioning at all times. If I were innocent I would have nothing to fear.

It seems to be the thing today to attack law and order in general.

Personally I am with the police and they could count on me for help at any time.-Correspondent.

Lot of Blather

The current talk about a possible water shortage next year is a lot of blather to cover up the facts. The authorities gather the free water from the surrounding area and sell it to us at a nice profit. If they release some of it without charge in order to save the salmon there will be that much less to sell next year, resulting in a loss of revenue. To our business and profitoriented leaders such a course would be a sin.

One wonders if there is a local politician or civil servant with the authority and guts to stop this nonsense and do what is needed right now. Or is it too late?-An Ordinary Joe.

Press reports now indicate that some of these doctors want to set up practice

The Quebec government made several concessions to the specialists but they finally went on strike because the government would not agree to allow them to bill their patients in excess of the regular fee schedule leaving the patient to obtain partial refund from the medicare plan. They wanted to get their full fee under medicare plus whatever the traffic would bear in any given case.

It is interesting to note that general practitioners did not support the specialists.

As a resident patient in B.C. I say to those money-grubbing specialists we do not need your kind of medicare in B.C., we do not want you here to exploit the sick. Do us all a favor and stay in your own province and serve the people.-John Wood, 3850 Blenkinsop.

As guests we found your city_polite and hospitable, with one unfortunate incident. At 7:30 one night I stopped at a small restaurant on Douglas. If you take a quick look at the place, it has a large advertisement painted on the wall adjacent to a parking lot that would lead an unsuspecting guest to believe the parking lot was available to guests of the restaurant. the most momentous and probably the most dangerous in American history. For Canadians, a month ago, this forecast would have sounded pretty fanci-ful and hyperbolic, or at least remote from their peaceful, snug society. No one who can think at all still holds such opinions now. They have been swept away, with many other illusions, by a human tragedy in Quebec and political events in Ottawa.

The American revolution or counterrevolution - call it what you will - has suddenly become highly relevant Canada, as Pierre Trudeau predicted in his famous Kingston speech (though he was slow to do anything about it). This unprecedented phenomenon is relevant not merely for plain reasons of geog-Taphy but for reasons much more subtle, and more inescapable.

What we see in the United States loday, we shall see, in greater or less degree, and with local variations, throughout the industrialized world tomorrow. The vast process unleashed by the machine wherever it operates will touch all mechanized societies, including the inflexible society of Russia. Thus Canadians, with their advanced technology, would be involved in the current American dilemma even if they lived on the far side of the globe. We shall be wise, therefore, to watch our neighbors and, if possible, avoid their worst mistakes.

Among others, the distinguished economist, sage and social gadfly, Professor John Kenneth Galbraith, explained these things for my instruction, his six feet and eight inches of lean anatomy stretched, horizontal, on a curious, custom-built chair.

Slow Adjustment

He said that the United States had led the world in technology and had achieved for the first time on earth, what he has called the Affluent Society. Therefore, inevitably, it had been the first nation to suffer the shattering fallout from a civilization to which men were not yet adjusted, and wouldn't be adjusted for some time yet, and not without a lot of angulah in the adjustment. Having encountered this sudden

By BRUCE HUTCHISON shock, unique in all mankind's experience, the United States would also be the first nation to solve the resulting

Dr. Galbraith, regarding false modesty as a sin and rarely committing it, knows the answer to the problems and is telling his Democratic master them. But after talks with some thinkers perhaps more perceptive than the professor, though less articulate, it seems to me that, despite all his brilliance and extraordinary gift of words, he over-simplifies those problems and underestimates the task of solving them. For they stand far beyond the range of economics and politics.

If the tortured American society can meet its obvious economic and physical needs by Galbraithian or alternative methods, and if it can remove the remaining social injustice from its general affluence, still that will be no more than the beginning of a solution.

Leaving aside the longer prospects for other report, I found the politicians of Washington, in both parties, agreed on a few practical points: that for the immedifuture, anyhow, the erratic pendulum of American life, after a wild lunge what we roughly call permissive left, will swing, and already is swinging, toward the centre; that it may swing too far in its pursuit of law, order and neglected morality, with the threat of ugly repression; and that the specific social problems facing President Nixon cannot be solved, or even long postponed, by any attempt to turn back the clock, as many of his supporters imagine.

USING IT FOR YEARS!

Observe, then, on the most superficial terms, the president's frightening agenda, all of it inherited from his predecessors or, more accurately, from deep historical currents so long misunderstood and mismanaged.

Nixon Problems

This man, mysterious in his own inner contradictions, his odd mixture idealism and cunning, must somehow extricate the United States from Vietnam without total defeat.

He must cure inflation without plunging into a real depression (as he certainly has not done yet).

He must curb the admitted insanity of the armament race, if the Russians will let him, without endangering the nation's

He must reduce its commitments abroad without starting, a retreat to isolationism.

L. He must start, at least, to remake American society on a more equitable design without repressing its wonderful energies, its genius of individual achievement, or its personal liberties.

No president, not even Lincoln, ever confronted a task so baffling. Beside it, the Civil War, while terrible, was simple its purposes clear, its victorious end.

Mr. Nixon created none of these problems, though the Democrats are attacking him now for the mistakes that they made in office, Such is the normal behavior of politicians, and the president. himself is no stranger to it. But in the crude over-simplifications of a congressional election year, as grossly exaggerated by Vice-President Agnew, Mr. Nixon's reliable hatchetman, we should not be distracted from the underlying realities. They will long outlast today's U.S. election, the presidential election of 1972, and doubtless Mr. Nixon's second term, if he wins it. Summarized, much too briefly, by men competent to discuss them, the realities include those mentioned above and another which Mr. Nixon did not inherit but may now be creating. In seeking to lower the feverish temperature of his people and to use the next five years for patient, constructive reforms, both foreign and domestic, the president runs a grave risk. If, while building an electoral majority for 1972, he polarizes society between the quarrelling extremes of right and left, he may well find that he cannot govern it, even with a mathematical mandate behind

For Temporary Use

This is the stark equation presented by Mr. Nixon's hatchetman. The president understands it, all right, he uses Mr. Agnew for his temporary political purposes, but he knows that society cannot be successfully governed from either of the extremes in a state of high Hence his search-groping, agonizing and complicated by his own contradictory nature—is for the centre, the workable compromise. So also is Mr. Trudeau's search, complicated by his own inner conflicts and by some purely Canadian circumstances. On the success or failure of the search, in the United States, Canada and every mechanical civilization, the dubious prospects of all men hang. But there is more to it than that, as I shall try to show.

As motorcycle sales have increased, however, so too have motorcycle injuries and deaths. Injuries and fatalities have escalated to what physiclans now refer to as "an epidemic of trauma."

Two years ago 2,000 people ere killed and 250,000 injured in motorcycle mishaps; this year 5,000 people will be killed and close to a million injured in such accidents. Although recent research into automobile accidents indicates an increasing interest in emotional and psychologi-cal causes, virtually no such research has been carried out in reference to the motor-cycle, even though the motorcycle is 16 times more mobile and causes five times more deaths per mile.

Over the past few years I have observed a group of have observed a group of patients manifesting unusual emotional investment in the motorcycle and sharing a number of general char-acteristics. One or more acteristics. One or more serious motorcycle accidents was common among them.

The findings presented here are from an in-depth study of nine motorcyclists, all college students, most of whom were seen in intensive, analytically oriented psychotherapy from one to three years. The conflicts observed in these patients document a recognizable clinical disorder that I have designated "the motor-cycle syndrome."

The relationship of the vehicle to these unconscious conflicts compounds the driver's anxiety, increases his tension, lessens his control, By ARMAND M. NICHOLI, MD.

The syndrome does not, of course, affect everyone who enjoys riding a motorcycle Riding a cycle can undoubtedly be fun. Furthermore, it is a fast and economical mode of transportation.

But the recognition and treatment of the motorcycle syndrome may be an effective step in reducing the rapidly rising rate of motorcycle accidents and deaths.

There are nine essential features of the motorcycle syndrome.

preoccupation with the motorcycle. When the patient is not actually riding a motorcycle, he tends to daydream con-tinuously of doing so. The mere sound of a distant motorcycle stimulates vivid fantasies.

Another feature is a history of accident-proneness extending to early childhood. A tendency of self-injury con-tributes to a long history of lacerations, fractures and concussions extending into the early years and, more re-cently, to the occurrence of Sleep, drugs, television, and alcohol provide escape from a monotonous, painful reality. The alcohol and drugs, of course, increase the risk of motorcycle accidents.

The motorcyclists in question also displayed defective self-image. In their associations and dreams they reveal deep-seated, often unconscious, feelings of being ugly, unintelligent, fat, weak, feminine and defective and frequently express a sense of having "something missing." The motorcycle serves compensate for this defective picture of themselves.

There was also poor im-pulse control. Aggressive and sexual impulses are difficult to express. Anger, especially toward the father, is turned inward and accounts in part for the patient's passivity, depression and tendency to self-injury

We Need Global Doomwatch'

By NIGEL CALDER New Statesman

Although the world has awoken to the pollution of the environment, the measures adopted against it so far are fragmentary and ad hos.

The tendency is still to wait for problems to become emergencies, before action is taken.

Some governments, it is true, have begun to ask for an overall view of antipollulion priorities; the past few priorities; the past few months have brought a Brit-White Paper on the subject and the first report of President Nixon's Council on Environmental Quality.

Nor should we bother only about materials which creep into the public's air, water and food. People have been repeatedly exposed to special hazards at work-hazards that are recognized belatedly.

In short, we have only scrappy information about how dangerous, or safe, our man-made environment really Whom are we to trust?

Industrialists are becoming more responsible about known pollutants, but there still tends to be a tussle whenever additions are made to the lists of hazardous materials.

More Carefree

Governments in a few countries, including the United States and Britain, have resources, expertise and legal powers or serious investiga-tion of collutants, but the state itself not disinterested where public policy, weaponry and the prosperity of major industries are in question.

For example, nations with big investments in puclear big investments in nuclear power are more carefree about radioactive pollution than other nations are.

So what about an inter national drive in basic re-search of the kind needed to understand the effects of manmade materials on living systems?

Until the prospects for big international laboratories look brighter again, the best hope is for regional co-operation in

But there is still a need for a glebal over-view—for an agency responsible for spotting possible hazards of development and innovation which national or international bodies have been ignored or bushed up.

Finer Pulp Developed

HAWKESBURY, Ont. (CP)-A new sulphite pulping process which produces pulp of superior strength has been developed by CIP Research Ltd., a subsidiary of Canadian International Paper

B. D. Hughson, president of CIP Research, says the superior pulp is produced from wood or wood residue. He stressed, however, that the new alkaline sulphite process has not yet been proven commercially. It still has to undergo ex-

Youth Pointed Rifle at RCMP

LAKE COWICHAN - Ronald David Edgar, 19, of Nitinat, threatened a RCMP officer with a loaded rifle Saturday night following a break-in of a coffee bar, court was told here Monday.

Edgar pleaded guilty to dangerous use of a firearm, possession of an offensive weapon, theft of a .308 rifle and breaking and entering a coffee bar.

He was remanded in custody to Nov. 16 for a pre-sentence report.

Lake Cowichan RCMP said two men detained Edgar as a suspect after the coffee bar had been forcibly entered Saturday night, but he broke away and stole a rifle as he fled.

Several men including Cpl. Scott Coxen of the RCMP tried to persuade the accused to give himself up, but he pointed the loaded rifle at Coxen and threatened to shoot if he was not allowed to Police said Edgar took a short ride in a commandeered car before running into bushes near the road. He then asked to speak to one of his friends, Nick Van Wyk, who together with Edgar's mother, finally succeeded in persuading him to give himself up to the police.

School Boards on the Spot To Stop Growing Violence

creasing "disaffection, unrest and violence" has placed a larger responsibility on school boards than ever before, Cowichan-Malahat MLA Bob Strachan told Cowichan trustees Monday.

"What we need in the future are schools and school boards that are involved in the making of a citizen."

It is no longer enough just to prepare a young person to earn a living, Strachan said. He hoped for greater community involvement in achieving the objective.

"You as members of a school board have a growing and changing responsibility the same as I have as a MLA."

MANY FEARS

Strachan explained to the board he has been visiting the school districts to sound out trustees on the school finance formula, regional colleges and amalgamation.

"I want your opinion on what is most important for 1971," he said.

Strachan said many fears were expressed when the school finance formula was introduced because difficult to maintain the quality of education,

Despite disadvantages suf-

Strachan said it could well have unforseen side effects. "it is bringing more com-longer available with the new Malaspina Regional College at Nanaimo was being discussed. Strachan said he disagreed with the finance formula under which it was going to be operated.

"When it came time to support the college I had to support it and I said then it wasn't the time to disagree with the finance formula. The time is at the provincial elections."

they more than make up for in enthusiasm and energy.

The lake-lubbers were organized by the Elk Lake Sailing Association, which is a rather imposing title for a group that's long on pro-moting sailing and short on regimentation side of things.

The aim of the game at Elk Lake is to have fun - advice is handed out to beginners as they sail around the course, often by Ivor Pearson in his patrol boat. Racing rules are dished out as the occasion demands.

John Ganton explains: "We want to make this a fun thing and keep the red tape to the minimum. There are a lot of little boats around Victoria, whose owners don't sail with one of the other cluss but who would like to learn's little bit about the game.

"They don't have to become members — just turn up on Sundays."

This Sunday there were a good 20 boats on the lake and Ganton reports that the numbers have increased steadily since ELSA began its winter sailing on Labor Day.

Brown Panther Death Suspect

By DOUG MacRAE

Poisonous mushrooms blamed in the death of Nanaimo man last week are growing in abundance in Vancouver Island gardens.

Mushroom fancier James Wallace, 34, picked one in a field behind his house in Nanaimo a week ago last Thursday. After eating it he lapsed into a coma and died four days later.

Coroner Dr. Michael Smart speculated today that the plant had been Amanita phalloides, the Destroying Angel, a mushroom with green cap and white spots.

This was ruled out by botanist Adam Szczawinski of the Provincial Museum, resident mushroom authority and co-author of Guide to Common Mushrooms of B.C.

Szczawinski said the Angel has never been found on the West Coast, and said a more likely culprit was the Amanita Pantherina, or Brown Panter.

The most recent poisoning case in the area involved three adults who ate mushrooms picked in the Malahat region. They were treated last week by Dr A. C. R. M'Gonigle of Sooke and released after two days' treatment at St. Joseph's M'Gonigle said his patients apparently had eaten only a few 'differen'' plants in a batch of edible mushrooms, thus diluting the poison to a point where the effects were not fate.

The Panther, Szczawinski sald, grows soundantly throughout Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, including The deadly mushroom has a coffee-brown can with white spots, white gills and stem, and has a globular growth at the base of the stem. Szczawinski warns that the stem globe often is hidden by the soil.

The plant is common in coastal B.C., and there are 'plenty" in Victoria, he said,

The other deadly mushroom common here is Amanifa Muscaria the Fly Mushroom. This red-capped plant is used dangerously often to induce hallucinations, but this early symptom may be only the first effect of eating the mushroom. The ultimate result can be come and death.

Szczawiński said there are other polsonous varieties in the area, but none so fatal as the Panther and Fly

The botanist dautioned that the best method of avoiding mushroom poisoning was to have thorough knowledge of the plants before picking and eating any.

And here's another letter inspired by our recent column

Dear Adele

I am a 14-year-old boy. Years ago the country did me favor, they thought, and said I could stay in at school longer so I could get more education before entering the labor force. Then I would earn more money for I would have a skilled trade. But the fact remains that this is still quoted to me why I should stay at school until I am 16 or 18 or through University. But the fact is that they want to keep me out of the labor force which is suffering from such terrible unemployment. It is bad for a father not to have a job. But what about a son who grows up unwanted by society. No job, no prospects, no hope. Isn't it time we organized ourselves so that people not profits count?

Dear Willie:

One good thing is that while you are 14, you have the chance for schooling. If you were 24, this would be conditional on other factors. We've got to start planning not for the time when hardly anyone will be working and we will all gain our feelings of worth from our other roles in life. So look around for other indications that there are people who need you and are interested in your welfare. You'll find, I bet, that you may feel "unwanted by society" but that there are lots of individuals in your lots of individuals in your neighborhood or classroom who want and need your support and friendship. Your gains may not be monetary but luckily at 14 you don't have to act as the bread-winner. And you may pick up couple of bucks anyway,

It has been about a month now that I've been appearing in print and I know your reactions have varied. How do you feel about the column?. How can it be improved? What would you like in-cluded? Let me know by COTTAGE FRUIT BREAD

Warm cottage cheese slightly. Measure water into a large bowl; stir in sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes then stir well. Stir in orange rind, cottage cheese, egg and half the biscuit mix. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed on mixer or 300 strokes by hand. Blend in remaining biscuit mix and fruit; beat until smooth. Scrape batter from sides of bowl. Cover and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk (about 30 minutes). Grease two 1-pound coffee cans well. Stir down batter by beating about 25 strokes. Spread batter evenly in pre-pared pans. Brush with melted butter. Cover and let rise until double in bulk (about 1 hour) or when batter reaches 12-inch from top of can. Bake in 350 degree F. oven 40 to 45 minutes. Remember of the part of the move from cans at once and cool on wire rack. (Makes two, small loaves.)

London Girls DON'T Wear Midis

Vancouver Sun fashion editor Diana Ricardo is a good type.

She is solidly anti-midi.

"I knew it was a rotten fashion from the beginning," Diana said in an interview when she was in Victoria to publicize her book, Should I Wear Clothes to a Wedding? (McLelland and Stewart):

"It's been a complete dis-ster for the people who tried to push it. They're still try"Isn't it fun to watch them

'Some people still say we'll be wearing it by spring, and there's a lot of propaganda about 'everybody's wearing it

'Not so. When people say the midi-will conquer, I, just say, 'we will see, Charlie Brown.''

Diana has more than intuition to judge by. She has statistics, like those from a British photographer she asked to take pictures of midis during two days on the girl watching beat. Then there was a friend of Diana's friend who spent a week in New York.

She saw a total of 12 midis on people.

All the others were in the stores, stockpiled. Those guys are caught holding the bag and they're desperate to unload. No wonder they spread propaganda about everybody wearing

Saturday Bazaar to Aid Handicapped Children

Women

Ceramics made by handicapped children will be a feature at the bazaar planner by the Women's Auxiliary to the G. R. Pearkes Clinic.

The bazaar will be held Saturday from 12:30 to 4 p.m. in the Britannia Legion Hall, 1616 Blanshard Street:

Security an RX For Drug Abuse

NEW YORK (UPI) - The newest prescription for parents, teachers and others hoping to help teen-agers avoid the drug abuse trap goes like this:

"Schools, parents and the open environment where boys and girls feel secure, wanted, loved, and free to express their innermost feelings."

The Rx is in a resource book for drug abuse educa-tion, developed as a part of the drug abuse education project being carried out in the U.S. by American Asso-ciation for Health, Physical education, and recreation and The National Science Teachers Association.

Marvin R. Levy, project director, recommends that strategy. He also believes the best deterrent where drug use is concerned amounts to a sound value system.

In the introduction to the guide, expecially prepared for eachers, he put it this way: "The best deterrent to drug abuse is the individual's value system and his assessment of the consequences associated with drug involvement.

Decision making can be aided when sensitive teacherpupil relationships based upon mutual understanding, integrity, and honesty are estab-

"Exaggeration, distorting ganda, not education, and have no place in the school."
Levy recommended also that the school program begin early, since it is no longer appropriate to conceive of drug abuse education as a secondary level. "Concepts, attitudes and behavior are developing during the elementary years and the school cannot ignore this unit or course only at the learning opportunity."

"The program should examine societal conditions that promote drug use and abuse. Drugs per se are not the issue; rather, the issue is why people use them."

Dr. Robert C. Petersen,

chief of the centre for studies of narcotic and drug abuse, Natonal Institute of Mental Health, also contributed to the guide.

He advised teachers avoid scare techniques since "these are usually ineffec-tive." He said they don't work because the teen-ager's direct knowledge frequently contra-dicts them.

"Teen agers are demanding and are entitled to —

High-Rise Gardeners Arise

By HILDA BEASTALL

In another two or three years Victoria may be organizing a garden club limiting its membership to those living above, say, the 10th (loor of apartment blocks, Heaven forbid! — I can hear horrified protests from ground level gar-deners. But I also have an ear tuned to high-rise balcony gardeners, who almost daily need some problem solved.

Plants in tubs at high elevations are Soon the leaves wither and drop. The only prevention is to replace the lost moisture in the foliage by frequent mistings of water around and over the branches.

The in turn will create the problem of balcony run-off.

Even normal watering of plant tubs must have provision made for drainage water to be taken down to ground level and not merely down to a lower balcony or over the face of

In the meantime she'd been some commercial TV and life seemed settled. Then David was offered the TV to continue with her fashion position in Toronto, where he now writes and directs films and commercials.

Once Pat and the family were settled here, she decided Designer Pat McDonagh of Toronto will have to grade down sizes and moderate her nonconformist look in the collection she is designing for the Japanese market. (CP photo.)

work and opened a boutique on fashionable Bloor Street. In a tongue-in-cheek gesture she called it The Establishment, since the clothes were definitely anything but con-servative. Then she sold the boutique and started a small factory making what she actory making what she called Re-Establishment clothes. It grew too rapidly. She was iled with orders from New York and Toronto stores, and then one of the big houses to whom she had shipped a largeorder went broke. The Mains order went proke. The Mains just hadn't the money to continue and also expand. Then a large firm in Toronto-backed her and her Re-Establishment label again is an important fashion factor.

The Mains have bought big old double house — on the home of Governor-General Roland Michener — in central Toronto. They are antique bugs and their finds range from bound copies of Illus-frated London News for 1851 to the copper top of a London gas street light.

The long, narrow living room-has two huge Victorian sofas, once horsehair but now velvet - and fabric-covered. There are also two chaise lounges, one in pink and the other in floral tapestry.

The basement panelled dining-room combines a 17th century Welsh cottage table with four aristocratic high-and narrow-back Edwardian chairs, pink velvet seats and Much of the old furniture Pat broughht with her by boat from England, the result of many forays to antique shops and Flea markets. "The men who moved us in," Pat said with a chuckle, "felt sorry for us and said we'd soon find some good new furniture in Toronto. ir of the evening on all channels will be taken up by coverage of returns. No regularly escheduled programs will be seen or Channels 4, 5, 7, 11 or 12. Channels 2 and 6 will provide live coverage of the election from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. with bulletins periodically through the rest of the evening.

ICE CAPADES, 7:30 p.m., Channel 8. This special shows highlights of the 1970 revue. David Janssen is the host and the company skates to such songs as the Age of Aquarius and Age of Love. World figure-skating champion Tim Wood performs to a medley of Bert Bacharach songs.

and in the Silent Spot he plays a tipsy barber

Tonight, wine-tasting is featured.

TELESCOPE, 8:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Vancouver journalist Pat Carney is featured in this half-hour production. Interviewed at her home in a logging camp, she discusses her career, her views on Women's Liberation and her activities in promoting the Canadian North.

STOREFRONT LAWYERS, 9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Deborah's romance with a prosecuting attorney is placed in jeopardy when she appears in court, defending against him. Her client is a young person accused of arson by firebombing, and she's sure he's innocent.

JOHNNY CASH, 9 p.m., Channel 8. Burl Ives, Bobby Sherman, Melanie and pianist Floyd Cramer are the guest performers. Johnny sings On This Side of the Law, part of the score he wrote for a movie to be titled I Walk the Line, after his hit song of sixteen years ago.

MAKING WINE, 8 p.m., Channel 10, This instructional program on the cable outlet is conducted by Stan Anderson,

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez BOB and JIM at QUADRA SERVICENTRE are celebrating their 25th Many people write, asking me if something can be done for a patient with multiple myeloma (myelo referring to bone marrow, and oma referring to tumor), which is a form of cancer scattered through the person's bones. There are a few patients who have the disease in so mild a form that for months they year togethe To show appreciation present their biggest savings need any treatment. Others have severe symptoms and For years physicians haven't had much in the way of treatment for multiple myeloma, hence I was much inaterested in an article on the subject by Drs. R. A. Kyle, J. E. Maldonado and E. D. Bayrd, of the Mayo Clinic, who have been using the drug L-phenylalinine mustard, plus several other drugs, such as Prednisone, a cortisone-like drug.

There are other problems besidesthe pain; sometimes, due to a failure of kidney activity, the person can become dehydrated (not have enough water in his body), and he has to be treated for that. If infections develop, they should be treated with antibiotics. Some physicians have reported that treatment with flourides. has helped. Fluoride tends to harden bones. If I had a disease like multiple myeloma, I would want to go to a big clinic where the doctors have seen perhaps many cases and have had much

Many people, especially older people, write to tell me that they are suffering much with shingles; the disease appears first as a row of little blebs or blisters, and is produced by the same as a row of little biebs of bilisters, and is produced by the same virus that produces chicken pox in youngsters. In young people, the bilisters may heal soon enough, but the person may be left with severe pain that can last for many months, and is likely to be resistant to most pain-killers. It is this remaining distress that people often complain to me about, asking if there is some way to

I have had my elderly patients with shingles pain use the I have had my elderly patients with singles pair tost drug oxycodone, and they have found it to be very helpful. Some doctors fear that it may cause addiction, but as yet, in three years, my patients using it have shown no sign of that At night; I help the person by giving enough strong sleeping medicine so that he or she will not have to lie awake the entire night

Threads Issue Lightly Treaded

Esquimalt council Monday night stepped gingerly into the dispute over conditions at municipal branch of the Silver Threads Service.

Council decided to refer to the society's board of directors all material it possessed on the issue and await a report from the board.

Much of the dispute, brought to the attention of council by a group of people who originally protested the firing of the branch secretary Mrs. Margaret Durell on Christmas Eve 1969, revolved around complaints against branch director Mrs. Sheila

Because of the personal character of some of the complaints, Mayor Arthur Young said council would not discuss personalities. Then he instructed the municipal clerk to read some of he eight letters council had received on the subject.

SEVEN AGAINST

Seven of the letters argued against the administration at the Esquimalt branch, One supported it.

Additionally, the munici pality had received a petition signed by 17 persons, including 12 Esquimalt residents, opposing any senior citizens centre not controlled by nunicipal council But these letters and the petition were no match for another petition signed by 175 members of the Silver Threads Service, though not all from the Esquimalt branch, which stated the signers were fully satisfied with Silver Threads oper-ations and repudiated charges against the society published in the Times Oct. 27.

Young told council the municipally has no power to regulate the affairs of a private society like the Silver NO DIFFERENT

Work on the Kinsmen Gorge Park should be completed by the end of the year, Esquimalt Ald. William Lock said Monday. Lock told Esquimalt council that the project, begun last year by the Capital Improvement District Commission at an esti-mated cost of $187,000, should show a $10,000 surplus.

Lock, Esquimalt's representa tive on the CIDC, said he hoped this surplus would be used for installations in the

Ald. K. A. S. Hill, who moved to submit all materials to the Silver Threads board, said he denied ever saying anything about the padding of books at the Esquimalt

Padding of attendance and counselling statistics was one of the charges made to council by Mrs. Durell. Hill said he heard that some people were saying that he had accused the society of padding its books.

Hill's motion passed unani-mously. After the meeting, Cummer said his group had gone as far as it could go. The only reason he and others brought the issue to council he sald, was because they had been told that Mrs. Haslam would be removed before the

A similar situation prevails in the large corporation division, which so far has reached only 37.6 per cent of its goal. All these firms have been contacted, and large donations are soon expected.

By T. GIL BUNCH I have never tired of watching a snake and its charmer, a bull and its matador, no matter how senile the serpent, how bewildered the bull.

Somehow the mystery of the situation itself never becomes tarnished, even by the most maladroit of practitioners.
And I succumbed again

Monday evening while watching The Victoria Theatre Guild's thriller, Wait Until Despite the feeblest of

piping and the clumsiest of cape-work, the situation contrived by Knott did not fail to send audience members, and I among them, home with spines å-tingle.

ping, how much more harrow ing the evening could have been had the play been directed and acted with an artistic competence to match the superb theatricality of the script. The shortcomings, and they were chiefly ones of omission rather than commission, would perhaps not have been so obvious had not one gentleman, John Getgood, brought on to the stage in the role of Harry Roat Jr., a considerable measure of the finesse, both in technique and style, which by comparison. the other members group so clearly lacked.

A TRANSFER

Directorially, the play had simply "happened," a transfer from page to stage. Seeing the situation in plas tic terms had probably added nothing, possibly detracted, from the thrill of a solitary reading of the same tense happenings in the form of a

Admittedly lights went on and off and telephones rang at all the appropriate times, but the real work of director, from the funda-mentals of stage movement through to the subtleties of pace, rhythm, tone and style, not to mention the development and control of acting

bers, had for the most part been sadly ignored.

How else can one account or the endlessly repetitive horizontal movement of the actors, mercifully at times in-front of a chesterfield, but more frequently half obscured behind it? How else can one explain the lack of sensitivity in both actor and director to the strong comic overtones in the early scenes of the play? And the "washing-basket" arms of Miss Marilyn Gynn, given to jiggling the laundry in moments of dire stress? Charitably, one can only suppose that each evening at is more than capable of doing, and thereby permitted Getgood to direct himself for formance a la Alec Guinness. But there is ample material in the script for an astute director to do more than merely exploit the skeleton of the plot. There is a dark and lazy comic irony in the scenes before the entrance of blind girl, there is a relaxed, warm, delicately kibbitzed relationship between husband and wife, there is room, and certainly need, for richness in her respectively difficult and mistaken relationships with Gloria (Rosalind Scott) and Mike (Jack Droy) script will reveal numerous such nuances, most of which remained unexplored in this production.

In the final analysis, how ever, though the bull be heavy and sluggish, the matador tired and lacking in sensitivity, there is always the tantalizing mystery of the hace between them and what is likely to happen there. This alone is worth a visit to Langham Court before Wait Until Dark ends its run outlawed Irish Republican Army accused Britain today of using terror tactics in Northern Ireland and threatened tough reprisals.

IRA Accuses Britain Of Terror Tactics

The threat underlined official fears that the two years of rioting and arson is entering a new and bloodier stage in the North. The IRA warning came after five consecutive nights of riots in which more than 50 persons have been wounded, among them a soldier whose foot was shattered by a bomb. The trouble started last Thursday when troops moved in to break up a brawl between rival mobs of Roman Catholic and Protestan youngsters.

An IRA spokesman told the Dublin-based Irish Indepen-dent newspaper: "If the British Army are going to continue using terror tactics we will meet them with terror

"It is not our policy to start trouble. But we shall protect innocent people attacked by the police or British army." British troops moved on to the streets of Belfast and

IRA REGROUPED

Since then the once dor mant IRA has regrouped and stepped up its longstanding campaign for an end to Ireland's partition.

Maj,-Gen. Tony Farrar-Kockley, commander of British land forces in the north, told a news conference he expected a long campaign of IRA violence in and around Belfast.

"We are on the threshold of much hotter operations," he said. He warned that army marksmen will shoot to kill throwers of gasoline bombs and grenades but added: "We are not prepared to shed innocent blood even if our own innocent blood is shed." In Dundalk, across the border in the Irish Republic, two shots were fired into bar where Cathal Goulding, leader of one of the two main Dublin IRA factions, was skinking Goulding and drinking.

Mary Livingstone to Make Brief Return to Husband's Show

"Then one morning. I woke up to me in Las Vegas and other palces and ask. me: 'Are you really married to Jack?' she remarks. "All during those years on radio and during they years I appeared on television with Jack, we never played husband and wife. I was always the girl who hung around and made wisecracks."

She has been Mrs. Benny for 40 years and at first a willing, later a reluctant, member of his stock company. Here's how she tells it:

"Then one morning. I woke up and said to Jack. 'I'm not going to do it any more.' He said. 'You're not going to do what any 'more?' I said. 'I'm not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to do it any more.' He said. 'The not going to be on the show any more.' No amount of persuation could change her mind.

OTTAWA — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield Monday called the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act a "very substantial improvement" over the existing regu-lations under the War Mea-sures Act proclaimed Oct. 16 after the kidnapping of Brit-ish Trade Commissioner James Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre

The new act, introdued in the Commons Monday by Justice Minister John Turner, would automatically revoke present regulations under the War Measures Act, and would expire next April 30 unless it is earlier revoked by govern-ment or continued by Parlia-

While Stanfield greeted the new measure with some approval, New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas declined to comment on it until he has given it thorough study. Sixteen of the 20 NDP MPs in the Commons at the time, including Douglas, voted against implementation of the War Measures Act.

Turner told reporters the government was anxious to revoke the War Measurs Act, "a very broad and blunt instrument that should be activated only in very unusual circumstances.

LESS ALL-EMBRACING

The new bill also provided government with an through the wording in the preamble and reduce the chances of it being used against other groups.

"There is very little chance, I think, of the bill being used against groups other than the FLQ," said the justice said the justice minister.

Turner said Canada's public order "continues to be en-dangered" by the FLQ and

KEY TO FUTURE

Although it lacks the glamor of a presidential duel, today's election will leave vital guideposts to future trends in U.S. politics.

More than any other presi-dent in history in a mid-term vote, Richard Nixon has campaigned throughout the country on the theme that the breakdown of law and order is the principle crisis in the fabric of American life today.

The people Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew calls "liberalradicals," and Democrats in general, are blamed.

Whether or not voters respond to this theme, or to the Democratic charge that the state of the economy is more important, will be reflected in several key con-

Seeing Trial Island from Douglas at View is a little like looking across the strait through the wrong end of a

Of course, you have to get high to do it. Like elimbing 24 flights of concrete stairs and two ladders to the recently-poured roof of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce new office tower. The last few buckets of structural concrete were being hoisted 161 feet, 4 inches above street level this week to finish the roof and parapets of Vancouver Island's largest office building both in height and total floor area.

The building, a project of Edmonton-based Oxford Leaseholds on land owned by the bank, rises a total 225 feet above sea level, starting at the 65-foot level on Douglas

Its bulk, consisting of 855 tons of reinforcing steel and 8,500 cubic yards of concrete, encloses 168,000 square feet of area, 130,000 of it

It is earthquake proof, being of flexible construc-tion; in a high wind up top there is about half an inch

Tenants from commercial. business, financial and professional community will occupy its 12 floors above grade and one below ground with one floor on top reserved for elevator, air conditioning, ventilation and heating sys-

Oxford project manager John Harris said tentative opening is set for May, 1971, almost one year behind schedule due to unforeseen delays caused by blasting bedrock, a cement drought and a construction industry lockout.

The bank building is higher than Executive House, or any other downtown building save perhaps the Gothic hulk of Christ Church Cathedral and the spire of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

Douglas Street is far more crooked than it appears to the motorist.

Harbor activity plane here, a rail ferry there, a tug and piledriver steaming in — is remote at altitude 225.

But all this will be conjecture to most people even after the building is finished, There will be no rooftop restaurant, no observation deck and no public access beyond the usual - and high offices of the top

25 Apply For Top Library Job Inner Harbor Debate

The chairman of the Greater Victoria Library Board said Monday that 25 applications have already been received for the position of director at the Victoria Public Library.

The position, director of library services, should be filed by the month's end, Arthur Cuthbert said.

"The new director will be busy streamlining the library," he said.

The new director will replace former chief librarian John Lort who resigned Oct. 27 after a controversial clash with the board on ways to improve library services.

Mrs. Ann O'Brien, children's library, is acting as temporary head of the library.

While Pollen suggested the whole Inner Harbor waterfront from Johnson Street to Ogden Point be declared a development area, assistant city manager Bill Hooson said such a plan would require changes in the Zoning Act.

Pollen also introduced vesolutions asking for Municipal Act amendments to get cities more land use control, and asking that a downtown businessmen's committee be set up to suggest wide innovations for revitalizing the downtown commercial

"We owe the population of Victoria a planned environ-ment in this area," Pollen told the committee.

Brown Panther Death Suspect

By DOUG MacRAE

Poisonous mushrooms blamed in the death of Nanalmo man last week are growing in abundance in Vancouver Island gardens.

Mushroom fancier James Wallace, 34, picked one in a field behind his house in Nanaimo a week ago last Thursday. After eating it he lapsed into a coma and died four days later.

Coroner Dr. Michael Smart speculated today that the plant had been Amanita phalloides, the Destroying Angel, a mushrosm with green cap and white spots.

This was ruled out by botanist Adam Szczawinski of the Provincial Museum, resident mushroom authority and co-author of Guide to Common Mushrooms of B.C.

Szczawinski said the Angel has never been found on the West Coast, and said a more likely culprit was the Amanita Pantherina, or Brown Panter.

The most recent poisoning case in the area involved thre adults who ate mushrooms picked in the Malahat region.
They were treated last week by Dr A. C. R. M'Gonigle of Sooke and released after two days' treatment at St. Joseph's Hospital.

M'Gonigle said his patients apparently had eaten only a few "different" plants in a batch of edible mushrooms, thus diluting the poison to a point where the effects were not fatal.

The Panther, Szczawinski said, grows abundantly throughout Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, including

The deadly mushroom has a coffee-brown cap with white spots, white gills and stem, and has a globular growth at the base of the stem. Szczawinski warns that the stem globe often is hidden by the soil. The plant is common in coastal B.C., and there are "plenty" in Victoria, he said.

The other deadly mushroom common here is Amanita The other deadly mushroom common here is Amanua Muscaria, the Fly Mushroom. This red-capped plant is used dangerously often to induce hallucinations, but this early symptom may be only the first effect of eating the mushroom. The ultimate result can be coma and death.

Szczawinski said there are other poisonous varieties in the area, but none so fatal as the Panther and Fly.

The botanist cautioned that the best method of avoiding mushroom poisoning was to have thorough knowledge of the plants before picking and eating any.

the home fireplace because of its salt content. After the last such warning, checked with Arthur Leason, chief fire protection officer for Victoria fire department. For a start, Leason told me that we who like 'em needn'tworry unduly about our driftwood blazes. They aren't going to tear the fireplace masonry apart, although over a very long period, their salt might do minor damage to grates, firedogs or metal baskets. though, that the impurities released by the slower-burn-ing driftwood fire may result in creosoting, especially if the wood is at all damp.

To avoid fireplace trouble Leason suggests, have your chimney cleaned and checked once a year, and make sure your beach-gathered wood is

It doesn't matter whether some employees of the provincial rehabilitation department are expressing discontent, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said Monday.

Some people always complain, Gaglardi said in reaffirming his policy of dismissing employees who fail to carry out department policy.

"There are no rumbles from any employees of the department that know they have to do a good job . . . Gaglardi said.

Anyone who "steps out of line" will be suspended, which has virtually the same effect as being dismissed, Gaglardi said.

Gaglardi last week said employees failing to follow policy would be fired "on the spot" but said Monday he wasn't "arguing" with a Civil Service Commission statement to the effect that civil servants can't be fired out of hand. Proper hearings must be held before a permanent civil service employee can be dismissed.

The residential division has reached 82.5 per cent of its $111,200 for Greater Victoria municipalities and districts excluding Cental Saanich North Saanich and Sidney.

The three peninsula municipalities add their fig-ures to the residential division for a total of $107,468.

Division chairman Mrs. C. Whitlock said she expects the division will top the 100 per cent mark soon.

Other divisions have reached between 50 and 80 per cent of their goals except for the business districts at 12.3 per cent, construction at 4.5 per cent and public service at 16.7 per cent.

ture in 200 m.p.h. missions. (CP Wirephoto)

By T. GIL BUNCH I have never tired watching a snake and its charmer, a bull and its matador no matter how senile the serpent, how bewildered the bull.

Somehow the mystery of the situation itself never becomes tarnished, even by the most maladroit of practitioners.
And I succumbed again

piping and the clumsiest of cape-work, the situation contrived by Knott did not fail to send audience members, and I among them, home with spines a-tingle. But how much more gripping, how much more harrow ing the evening could have been had the play been directed and acted with an artistic competence to match the superb theatricality of the script. The shortcomings, and they were chiefly ones of omission rather than commission, would perhaps not have been so obvious had not one gentleman, John Getgood, brought on to the stage in the role of Harry Roat Jr., considerable measure of the finesse, both in technique and style, which by comparison, the other members of the group so elearly lacked.

A TRANSFER Directorially, the play had simply "happened," a trans-fer from page to stage. Seeing the situation in play tic terms had probably added nothing, possibly detracted, from the thrill of a solitary happenings in the form of a Admittedly lights went on and off and telephones rang at all the appropriate times, but the real work of a director, from the fundamentals of stage movement through to the subtleties of pace, rhythm, tone and style, not to mention the developent and control of acting

bers, had for the most part been sadly ignored.

How else can one account for the endlessly repetitive horizontal movement of the actors, mercifully at times in front of a chesterfield, but more frequently half ob-scured behind it? How else can one explain the lack of sensitivity in both actor and director to the strong comic vertones in the early scenes of the play? arms of Miss Marilyn Gynn, given to figgling the laundry moments of dire stress?

Charitably, one can only appose that each evening at rehearsal the director cumbed to the plot too, simply did not notice the deficiencies, allowed the script to play itself out as it is more than capable of doing, and thereby permitted Getgood to direct himself for his own and our entertain-ment in an arresting performance a la Alec Guinness

. But there is ample material in the script for an astute director to do more than merely exploit the skeleton of the plot. There is a dark and lazy comic irony in the scenes before the entrance of the blind girl, there is a relaxed, warm, delicately kibbitzed relationship between husband and wife, there is room, and certainly need, for richness in the character of Suzy through her respectively difficult and mistaken relationships with Gloria (Rosalind Scott) and

A careful analysis of the script will reveal numerous such nuances, most of which remained unexplored in this production

In the final analysis, however, though the bull avy and sluggish, the mata-or tired and lacking in sensitivity, there is always the tantalizing mystery of the space between them and what is likely to happen there. This alone is worth a visit to Langham Court before Wait Until Dark ends its run,

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) - A partly-open railway yard switch that police say had been tamp-ered with is blamed for a 21-car derailment of a westbound CNR freight train about 200 yards from the station here Monday

No injuries were reported i the derailment which cut the transcontinental mainline of the railway. Pembroke city police said a switch had been somehow tampered with as the 90-car Ottawa North Bay freight entered the station about 7:30 p.m. The two engines and the first o cars of the train, which was nauling mixed freight, stayed on the track as did all the cars in the rear of the train. Other cars were ripped from their wheels, tipped over and strewn across the track.

The CNR's transcontinental passenger train, the Super Con-tinental, had to be diverted to CP Rail track on its trip west from Ottawa.
